DISCLAIMER: ABOUT TEMPERAMENT EVALUATIONS

Please be advised that the temperament evaluation scores provided by Big House K9 are intended to serve as informative tools offering insights into the personality traits of the assessed puppies. These evaluations reflect their temperament up to the point of assessment. However, it is imperative that you collaborate closely with Daneesha & Brandon, our experienced professionals, for personalized guidance when selecting a puppy.

It is important to acknowledge that while these evaluations provide valuable information, a single aptitude test cannot comprehensively encompass all the variables that contribute to a dog's temperament. Factors such as environment, socialization, and training can significantly influence a dog's behavior over time.

Nevertheless, this report aims to equip you with a substantial understanding of the temperament traits exhibited by each puppy and how they may align with your individual requirements and lifestyle.

Our ultimate goal at Big House K9 is to ensure that every dog finds a suitable placement where they can thrive and forge a meaningful and harmonious connection with their new family. We are committed to empowering you to make informed decisions about your puppy selection.

Additionally, we strongly emphasize the importance of initiating training for your puppy immediately upon bringing them home. Proactive training not only helps prevent behavior issues but also strengthens the bond between you and your new companion. Please do not wait until you encounter a problem before starting training.

TEMPERAMENT TRAINING PLAN

NAME : MAC

LITTER : ROASTED WITH LOVE

DATE : 8/25/2024

Mac is an energetic and affectionate puppy who exhibits a curious and friendly temperament. He loves exploring new environments and engaging with both people and other animals, showcasing his sociable and adaptable nature. This temperament test is a valuable tool to guide his training by highlighting his strengths and areas where he may need extra support. Remember, as Mac grows older and experiences different environments, his personality and behavior will continue to evolve. Utilizing positive reinforcement techniques will not only strengthen your bond with Mac but also encourage desirable behaviors, making training an enjoyable and effective experience for both of you.

TRAIT	TRAINING PLAN
ENERGY LEVEL	Provide Mac with mental stimulating toys (brain games) throughout the day to help from him getting bored. Kongs, puzzles, lick mats, food puzzles are great options.
TOUCH TOLERANCE	Continue to desensitize to various handling. Trim nails weekly with fingernail clippers and round them off using a quiet dremel (I recommend PupWells dremel as it super quiet).
PATIENCE	To teach Mac patience, start by incorporating short waiting periods during play and mealtime, gradually increasing the duration as he learns to wait calmly for rewards and attention.
SETTLE	To help Mac learn to settle and relax, start by teaching him to go to a designated spot, such as a bed or mat, using positive reinforcement. Gradually increase the duration of time he stays there, rewarding him for calm behavior and gently redirecting him if he becomes restless.
OVERSTIMULATION	To help Mac avoid overstimulation, use the crate as a calming space by placing high-value rewards inside. Gradually increase the time he spends in the crate with the rewards, reinforcing calm behavior and using the crate as a retreat from overstimulating situations.

Start Mac's training sessions in a quiet, familiar environment to minimize distractions. Use high-value treats and plenty of verbal praise to reward his desired behaviors. Begin with short, frequent training sessions, gradually increasing their length as Mac's attention span develops. Be consistent with cues and commands, and always end sessions on a positive note. If Mac shows signs of stress or discomfort, take a step back and return to a simpler task that he can easily accomplish to build his confidence. Remember, patience and consistency are key in helping Mac develop into a well-mannered and confident adult dog.
